

DEFIANCE COUNTY.

The juncture of the Auglaize with the Maumee river, in Defiance county, was an important aboriginal point. It was here that the trail leading north from the Miami and Scioto trails, met the Maumee river, and became a water highway down the Maumee to Lake Erie.

Numerous indications of habitation are found at this meeting point of trail and stream. Village and camp sites abound and burials and a few mounds have been noted. Several Indian villages were found here by the first white adventurers.

The topography of the county as a whole, was not conducive to permanent settlement and excepting the section mentioned, it contains but few earthworks.
