

WYANDOT COUNTY.

Wyandot county, with its fine streams and valleys, was a favorite country with the aborigines, both in historic and pre-historic times. Early explorers found many Indian villages along the Sandusky river and the numerous prehistoric sites show that in earlier times it was of equal popularity. The Scioto-Sandusky trail passed through the county and thus placed it upon one of the greatest aboriginal thoroughfares in the state.

The valleys of the Sandusky river and its tributary, Tymochtee creek contain most of the sites in the county. There are a total of 81 sites, divided as follows: Enclosures, 1; mounds, 53; village sites, 8; cemeteries, 1, and burials, 18.
